FOLIO MEETS BAYI AND SHAHANGA

Last week Folio staff had the honor of meeting two of the great athletic competitors of the recent Commonwealth Games, Filbert Bayi and Gidemias Shahanga of Tanzania.

Mr. Bayi is a veteran middle distance runner and winner of the silver medal in the 1500 m event on the last day of the Games, narrowly missing first place. His world record of 3:32.2 (3 minutes, 32.2 seconds) in this event, set at the 1974 Commonwealth Games in Christchurch, remains unbroken.

Mr. Shahanga, who comes from the same part of Tanzania as Mr. Bayi, is a young long distance runner and the surprise winner of the Commonwealth Games marathon on 11 August.

Both athletes felt they had been "received very well and treated very well" during their stay in Edmonton, although they admitted that they were "concentrating on their training" and so were not really able to comment on games organization or the special events that were planned for the competitors.

Mr. Bayi was pleased with the training facilities and commented that the track at Varsity Stadium on campus, with its new rubberized surface, is a good fast track, significantly faster than the track at Commonwealth Stadium; the latter, he said, "will be a better track after it has been used more." For his training, he runs eight to ten miles a day, in total, for six days a week ("I always rest on Sundays"). As with Mr. Shahanga, his training does not stop merely because the Games are over.

Mr. Shahanga's training consists of running eleven to sixteen miles each morning, then running middle distance and sprints in the afternoons. His impressive marathon victory, two hundred metres in front of the second and third place Canadian runners, was a personal best time for him of 2:15:39.7 (two and one quarter hours approximately); before he came to compete here, his personal best time was 2:21, substantially slower than the best times of many of the other competitors in that race.

Mr. Shahanga was not among the leaders in the race until well past the halfway point in the forty-two kilometre course. "I didn't expect to win," he said. "I was only hoping I might get a medal." At one point in the race, he said, "I turned around and saw that there was no one behind me who seemed still able to win the race. In front were six other runners, so I decided to race with them." He felt the conditions for the race were excellent for him, unlike the marathon two weeks earlier in Algiers where the temperature was 40°C and hot winds were blowing off the desert. Normally the marathon is such a physically taxing race that runners space their races by six weeks at least; to run two marathons in two weeks is a wonder in itself.

Both athletes train at over 5,000 feet above sea level in Tanzania, so the altitude at Edmonton proved to be no problem for them. Food presented a slight problem, in that the food they prefer for training at home, a kind of easily digestible mash made from maize meal, was not available; however they had plenty of substitutes like rice and potatoes. On race days, both prefer to eat lightly, and instead of eating more starchy foods, they turn to vegetables and fruit.

Colonel Roland Mikunda, the Tanzanian team manager, stated his government's intention to "go all out for sports," saying that its policy was that "sport should be developed and enhanced. Technicians are at work now trying to improve sport in all ways in Tanzania, and they wouldn't be there without the government's strong support."

Both runners expect to be competing in the 1980 Olympics in Moscow and in the 1982 Commonwealth Games in Brisbane, Australia.

But for them, they strongly prefer the Commonwealth Games. "These really are the 'friendly games'," Mr. Bayi said. "All of us come here and make friends with the other athletes. Color or race mean nothing to us. When we are on the track, we are trying to beat each other and we are running for our countries, but as soon as the race is over, we are all friends together again."

Mr. Bayi competed in the 1972 Olympics in Munich and would have competed at Montreal but for the African boycott of the Olympics in 1976. He said he felt the atmosphere in the Olympics to be much more tense, with much less chance for the athletes to make friends with each other. He expressed a disappointment with the politicizing of sport and with so many journalists who ask him first about politics and second about running.

Last Tuesday, during their interview with

Photographs by John Luckhurst

Folio, they said the Games Village, the Lister Hall complex, was "getting lonelier all the time," as more and more of the teams returned to their respective homes. They themselves were leaving the following day, expecting to arrive home on Friday and to be greeted by a large crowd of happy countrymen.

Now all the teams are gone, and Lister Hall, the rest of the University, and the city are getting back to normal. Perhaps preparing for the annual influx of students in less than a month will help cure the post-Games depression that seems to hang over much of the campus now that the excitement of the Commonwealth Games and the color of Festival '78 are over.

DAY CARE CENTRE TO OPEN SOON

University staff will have a day care centre available for their children by 2 October.

The Academic Women's Association and the University Day Care Committee announced this week that they have been offered excellent space in Windsor Park School, two blocks from the campus. The space, two large, sunny, carpeted classrooms, should accommodate thirty children from two and one half years to school age. The location is ideal from the point of view of University staff and is adjacent to a very good playground and park.

The need for day care is not a new need for working parents, and the lack of high quality, proximate, dependable day care has been a serious problem for University staff, particularly teaching staff, for many years. Although the Students' Union and Community Day Care Centre in the Housing Union Building provides excellent care, it has been able to accept only a few children of non-academic staff and none of academic staff. Moreover, the waiting list for the HUB centre has been prohibitively long since its beginning.

Although provision of a user-pay day care facility by the University for its staff was recommended by the University Senate and given approval in principle by the University Planning Committee, efforts to obtain funds sufficient to build a day care centre on campus have been unsuccessful. To provide day care as soon as possible rather than wait until a separate building could be provided on campus, the University Day Care Committee decided to consider space that might become available in schools near the University, where enrolment has declined in recent years.

The space in Windsor Park School was recently vacated and was offered by the Edmonton Public School Board to the Committee on 31 July.

The University Day Care Committee is now negotiating with the Edmonton Public School Board regarding the length of tenure in this space, rent, and minor renovations (such as installation of a washroom with child-sized fixtures) that will be necessary to meet the provincial day care licensing regulations.

Discussions are also in progress with the Board of the Students' Union and Community Day Care Centre, with whom the University Day Care Committee hopes to work closely. Pending approval from the Board of the HUB centre, its Director, Diane Dalley has agreed to give practical assistance with such problems as staffing, registration, determining equipment and furnishing needs, budget estimates, and interpretation of licensing regulations.

The new day care centre will be called the University and Community Day Care Centre.

A fund drive organized by the Academic Women's Association and the University Day Care Committee during the winter to demonstrate the level of personal support at the University for a day care centre accessible to staff children yielded over $7,400 in donations and pledges towards capital costs. These funds will be used to help finance renovations and furnishings to meet day care regulations. In the event that the day care centre ever obtains its own building, most of the furnishings and equipment could be moved there. Pledges are being called in to apply to these costs, which have an immediate urgency because of the 2 October starting date.

Although the University and Community Day Care Centre may be available to children other than those of University staff, it is intended that the children of academic and non-academic staff, particularly those who have donated towards the day care project, would have first consideration for places.

Donations are still welcome and would be a most useful contribution towards furnishings and other start-up costs (once it is established, the centre is intended to operate on a break-even basis). Cheques should be made payable to the Academic Women's Association Day Care Project and sent to Sheila Brown, Treasurer of the AWA, in care of the Faculty of Business Administration and Commerce, 422 Central Academic Building.

Parents interested in enrolling their children for this fall are invited to telephone Ann Marie Decore, Assistant Professor of Educational Foundations, at 432-2158 or 433-7316, or Elizabeth Richards, Assistant Professor of Home Economics, at 432-2475 or 433-3782, for further information and application forms.

RELIGIOUS STUDIES ACTIVE IN FILM MAKING

The University of Alberta's Department of Religious Studies under the chairmanship of Earle Waugh has been active in the development of the "Religious Diversity Series." Since late 1975 the department, in cooperation with Access Alberta, has been researching and video-taping programs which explore a number of the traditions which are prominent on Alberta's denominational landscape. Nine thirty-minute programs have been completed and the tenth and final program, a study of Native Religious Traditions, is now being planned.

The programs are available only on cassette for playback on television, but they will be produced on 16 mm film early in the fall. Dr. Waugh intends to show the programs to interested persons when the campus swings back into full activity next month. He says that the series will likely be televised province-wide on a weekly basis next summer.

The complete programs are: The Mormons; Zion Builders of Alberta; Orthodox Judaism in Calgary; the Jehovah's Witnesses of Calmar; Anabaptist Tradition: The General Conference Mennonites of Coaldale; Smoky Lake Russo-Greek Orthodox; Carbon Baptist Church; Girouxville French Catholic; Raymond Buddhist; and Lebanese Muslims of Edmonton and Lac La Biche. The series is designed for educators' use, adult education classes, and starter material for religion in Canada classes. Required extra-class reviewing assignments are also some of the areas in which the series may be shown.

Dr. Waugh explains that the format of the series was to encompass roots of the tradition predating its Alberta founding. It will also focus on immigration, religious responses, contemporary expression centering on a family within the group, and points of irritation or difference at the interface of the tradition and larger society. "While the series is shot in Alberta, its themes are such that it has wide North American relevance," says Dr. Waugh.

Each tradition in the series is explored through the words and actions of the family selected to represent that tradition. Dr. Waugh noted that "Our goal was to let each tell us what they do and why they are doing it." Each program was filmed on location and houses, churches, farm lands, and country roads provide many of the backdrops.

Urbanization, ethnicity, the impact of secularization, and the impact of affluence are themes common to the series. Dr. Waugh reports that some of the programs have been shown elsewhere in Canada as well as in some areas of the United States and that the response has been gratifying to the producers.

NOTICES

Because of the closure of University Buildings on 4 September, all notices for the 7 September edition of Folio must reach the Editor by 9 a.m. on 31 August. Written notification is necessary.

Retirement Reception

There will be an informal reception to honor K. Kowalewski, Director of the Surgical-Medical Research Institute, on the occasion of his retirement. The reception will be held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. on 31 August in the SMRI Conference Room, 1064 Dentistry Pharmacy Centre. All of Dr. Kowalewski's friends and colleagues are invited to attend and join in expressing their good wishes to him.

Heritage Canada Documentation Centre

The Heritage Canada Documentation Centre facilitates and encourages practical research into the protection and promotion of Canada's historic, architectural, and natural heritage. When a student is undertaking research in any course or as a thesis and the topic falls within Heritage Canada's area of interest, the Documentation Centre should be notified. Upon receipt of notice, Heritage Canada will permit the student access to the research files, will notify the student of similar projects known elsewhere, will inform other researchers, and will provide such other information as is possible under the circumstances. These services are offered by the organization upon the understanding that its Documentation Centre will receive a copy of the research once it is completed and corrected.

For further information about the Documentation Centre and about other Heritage Canada activities contact: Heritage Canada Documentation Centre,

PO Box 1867, Station B, Ottawa,

Learning is Living

Twice yearly, the Faculty of Extension joins the twenty-five other members of the Edmonton Association for Continuing Education and Recreation (EACER) in publishing the "Learning is Living" supplement to the Edmonton Journal. This section of the paper contains the calendar of upcoming course offerings of many of the member organizations. The distribution of the information via daily newspaper brings it into the homes of more people than could possibly be reached through direct mail: the supplement is at once a calendar and an advertisement.

The information is intended to lead interested adults directly to the source of the program in which their interest lies. The range of courses described in this publication bears out the theme stated in the title: "learning is living." Should an individual wish to obtain high school credits, embark on a course of study leading to a certificate in a particular field, or pursue a self-directed program to broaden personal or vocational horizons, the information he requires will be in the supplement. In addition to academic studies, many EACER members offer recreational programs in arts, crafts, and fitness at levels to accommodate both the beginner and those who are more advanced. The choices available to adult students in the Edmonton area are wider than most people expect.

The Learning is Living supplement is intended to provide a condensed source of information for browsing and to facilitate both contact with and enrolment by the public. Some programs are expanded upon in articles and photographs to provide background for those people who are interested but undecided.

The supplement will be in the 28 August issue of the Journal. Copies will also be available at all branches of the public library or from the Faculty of Extension in Corbett Hall.

Interviewers Required

Starting in September, interviewers are needed for various University research projects operated through the Department of Sociology. Persons with a car and some experience in interviewing are preferred. For further information contact Cliff Kinzel, Population Research Laboratory, 1-62 Tory Building, telephone 432-4659.

Mature Student Orientation

Beginning on 28 August, the Office of Student Affairs will be conducting an Orientation Program for Mature Students. The program is intended to deal with questions and concerns of students who have been away from the academic environment for some time. Sessions will cover such areas as registration, course selection, student services, financial aid, library use, and study-skills. For further information contact the Office of Student Affairs, telephone 432-4145.

International Student Orientation

An orientation program designed for newly arrived foreign students will be held from 29 August to 1 September in 2-1 Mechanical Engineering Building. For further information contact the International Student Office, telephone 432-4145.

Credit Union Opening

The University of Alberta Credit Union Ltd. will be holding an official opening on 28 August. The opening marks the recent expansion and relocation of the facilities into the new premises on the HUB Mall. The opening will take place at 2 p.m. at 8920 112 Street, HUB.
